

SEA Semester®

New England Mariners and the Global Ocean

Fall Lecture Series with Dr. Mary Malloy

For three centuries, New Englanders have sailed across the Atlantic, around the great Capes, and into every ocean in search of commerce, whales, and scientific knowledge. The impacts of the earliest voyages can still be seen in environments and communities around the globe. In this series of four lectures, Dr. Mary Malloy, Professor of Maritime Studies and Director of the Global Ocean program at SEA, will trace the routes of Yankee mariners from the late-eighteenth century to the present, including the voyage of a recent SEA class of college students from Tahiti to Hawaii.

Free and Open to the Public

WHEN: 2nd Sunday of the month, 2p.m.

WHERE: Sea Education Association
James L. Madden Center Lecture Hall
171 Woods Hole Road, Falmouth, MA
Refreshments will be served

Gustav Doré, Rime of the Ancient Mariner, 1876

Sunday afternoon, September 15, 2013

The Global Ocean at the turn of the Nineteenth Century: The Notorious Career of Captain Samuel Hill of Boston

FREE BOOK: Everyone who attends will receive a signed copy of Devil on the Deep Blue Sea: The Notorious Career of Captain Samuel Hill of Boston by Mary Malloy.

Nathaniel Philbrick called the book “a tour de force—Highly recommended.”

Sunday afternoon, October 13, 2013

Seeking Whales in Every Ocean

Sunday afternoon, November 10, 2013

Pacific Art and Artifacts Collected by American Mariners

Sunday afternoon, December 8, 2013

Sustainability in Polynesian Island Cultures and Ecosystems

Sea Education Association, 171 Woods Hole Road, Falmouth MA

www.sea.edu ☸ 508-540-3954

